PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

There are TONS of digital products we can use in our practices these days. Not only are there a lot of EHRs from which to choose, but there are also SO many different tools and approaches for accomplishing the tasks we need in the day-to-day running of our practice that it can become overwhelming. This workshop will teach you concepts, so you'll be able to make wise choices in the seemingly never-ending offerings of new tools to make our lives easier. We'll go into the concept of integrated products a little more deeply to highlight those advantages. We'll also talk a bit about what's available, i.e., tools that truly MAY make your life easier. Finally, we'll discuss patient portals – why they're important and how to shop wisely for one.

WORKSHOP OBJECTIVES

At the completion of this workshop, you will be able to:

1. Participants will be able to list one pro and one con for both WebRTC types of video platforms (e.g., Doxy.me) and native app platforms (e.g., Zoom).
2. Participants will be able to list at least 3 practice management tasks that can be done with digital tools/EHRs.
3. Participants will be able to list at least 3 tools a patient portal should have and explain why threaded email (as opposed to simple memo type products) is an important portal tool.

TARGET AUDIENCE

The DPA plans and promotes programs serving the continuing educational needs of psychologists and professionals across a variety of disciplines. DIVERSITY STATEMENT

Some EHRs use forced-choice formats that can be invalidating to individuals belonging to non-dominant groups. A common problem is around gender identity in that some EHRs don't ask about gender at all, and for "sex" only offer a forced choice, i.e., male or female, since that's what's required by insurance companies. Lau et al (2020) have discussed this issue in terms of the lack of precise and inclusive language for gender, sex and sexual orientation (GSSO).

The "forced choice" format of some EHRs can also create problems when asking questions about race and/or cultural heritage. We will discuss this and any other issues that some EHRs may pose for non-dominant groups as well as possible ways to alleviate the issues.

The DPA recognizes the study and practice of psychology exists within a majority culture that does not afford equitable access and opportunity to all and is striving to actively dismantle policies and processes that oppress individuals and groups. In our effort to shift systemic inequalities and foster inclusion and equality, we are starting a fund that will provide yearly grant awards to students and professionals of color at the secondary, undergraduate, graduate, and post-doctoral levels as well as established professionals and career changers.
